Syrian force stays; Beirut tension builds

BEIRUT, Feb. 5 (AP) - Syria halted its withdrawal of peacekeeping troops from Beirut Tuesday, reducing sharp tensions that built up among Lebanon's civil war combatants in the past 24 hours.

Sniper fire cracked across the Fuad Chehab Boulevard as motorists screeched to a halt, jumped out and raced for cover. City police immediately closed the highway for traffic between Beirut's Muslim and Christ-

Police spokesmen were unable to determine the source of fire or compile a quick report of casualties. They said, that traffic was normal on all other highways linking the two halves of the war-divided Lebanese capi-

This was the fourth incident of violence since the Syrians announced their pullout plans from Beirut.

Rival gunmen waited in three different spots where they thought the Syrians had vacated peacekeeping posts Tuesday. Each side wanted to win control of the positions and the steel-helmeted Syrians had to fire their machine guns to quell the quarrels. Three runmen were hospitalized.

Militiamen in checkered fatigues have since been milling around Syrian positions in the mostly Muslim west Beirut, ready to move in if the Syrians moved out.

Spokesmen for rightist militias in mostly Christian east Beirut reported their forces were put on "maximum alert." But they said the measure was only a precaution and that they do not intend to rekindle the civil war. There were no reports of fresh violence in the divided Lebanese capital. Syria formally told the Lebanese government Monday that its decision to pull its peacekeeping forces from mid-city buffer zones separating warring Muslim and Christian militias in the Beirut area was "irrevers-

But Syrian President Hafez Assad ordered the pullout delayed for a few days to help the Lebanese government of President Elias Sarkis avert a potential security vacuum.

Assad's freeze of the withdrawal followed unexpected trips to Damascus by Lebanese Prime Minister Salim Hoss, and Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat.

The Damascus rush reflected the alarm that the Syrian pullout decision caused in the Arab world.

Official explanations of the Syrian move still are sketchy. Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam Monday told reporters the decision was taken "for the sake of both countries." But he did not elaborate.

The government controlled Damascus daily Techrin said "Syria will not tolerate a transformation of Lebanon into a trap in the hands of the Camp David parties to bleed Syria and expose its troops."

Well-informed sources here said Syria is fearful of an Israeli attack through its soft underbelly in Lebanon's eastern Bekaa Valley, which is generally considered a virtual military corridor to Damascus, the Syrian capital.

Syria has reliable information that Israel plans to deal such a blow," said Khaddam in a report published Tuesday by Beirut's daily As Safir, which has access to the senior echelons of Syria's ruling Socialist Baath Party.

"Syria is in full coordination with the Soviet Union to cope with this eventuality. This coordination included the decision to pull out from Beirut," Khaddam said, according to As Safir. The Syrians were reported to have informed the Lebanese government that troops withdrawn from Beirut would be reassembled in the Bekaa Valley to strengthen Syrian defense against Israel.

Of the overall 22,000-strong Syrian peacekeeping army in Lebanon, an estimated 5,000 are deployed in Beirut and its immediate suburbs.

They have thinned out their presence in the Muslim sector and the suburbs of the Christian sector. But preparations that were visible underway for an immediate pullout Monday were not in sight Tuesday.

Urban and Rural Development Company

Government sources here said Hoss received assurances that the Syrian withdrawal will not include Beirut's international airport or the Lebanese army's three main garrisons in the Muslim sector. Syrians have been guarding the busy airport since it was reopened for international traffic in 1977, following Syria's military intervention in November, 1976 to smother the civil war.

The Syrians also took control of the three garrisons from Muslim groups that invaded the barracks when the regular Lebanese Army fell part during the 19-month sectarian conflict that took more than 37,000 lives.

Syrian and Lebanese official statements did not spell out a specific deadline for the execution of the withdrawal after the "few days delay" ordered by Assad.

Beirut sources however, said the final pullout will begin Friday and is scheduled to be completed within six days. Sarkis and Hoss are holding conferences with army and internal security commanders to draw up a security plan to cope with the withdrawal. Assad, commenting on a decision to recall Syria's peacekeeping troops from the Lebanese capital, Tuesday said he did not want to see his men performing a policeman role in the streets. We do not want to see our troops playing the role of police in the streets," he said.

"Undoubtedly, we wish our brothers, Lebanon's officials, to move a little, if not a lot, towards national entente," he continued adding," It has been four years that we are inthis situation and nothing ever happens in Assad stated that Syria shall remain committed to its duties "as a deterrent force whose task is to maintain security in Lebanon. We have helped stop the fighting, others should agree to dislodge the roots of tension and combat in Lebanon."

Arabs outraged by FBI tactics in bribe scandal

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5 - Arab diplomats and Arab-American interest groups here reacted with anger and dismay to the FBI's use of fictitious "Arab businessmen and oil Sheikhs' to entrap U.S. Congressmen and other officials on bribery charges.

Eight members of Congress - one senator and seven Representatives face possible prosecution following an FBI "sting" operation called "ABSCAM," in which FBI undercover agents posing as wealthy Arabs or their go-betweens made cash payoffs to the legis-lators in Washington and New York. A Saudi diplomat here called the FBI's use of so-called Arabs in the operation "very strange, very serious." "We want to find out who is behind this," he said. A diplomat from the United Arab Emirates said, "There is considerable anger at our embassy. Couldn't the FBI find anyone else to use but Arabs? This shows how Arabs are really regarded here. In American eyes, are Arabs the only corruptible people in the

A prominent Palestinian here called the FBI's use of Arab characters "a shameful thing for the Americans."

The Palestinian said, "The Arabs in the United States are very angry about this, and they feel bitterness toward the Arab states and their representatives here because of their inaction.

He described the opertion as part of ongoing Zionist efforts to discredit the Arabs in the United States.

He noted that the FBI has longstanding links with Israeli intelligence and he said the FBI is currently engaged in a campaign of harrassment against the Palestinian community in this country.

An official at the Egyptian embassy said the very idea of using "Arabs" in the FBI operation "showed very bad taste."

The diplomat said the aim of the operation "is still unclear. I suspect it had a great deal to do with domestic political infighting here. The use of Arabs may be peripheral."

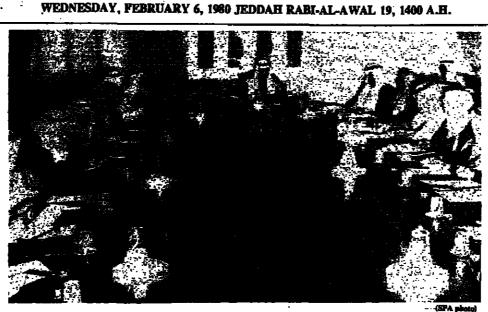

The official said it was also possible that "the FBI wanted to show Congressmen that it could hurt them, just as Congress in the past has hurt the FBI." A major Arab-American interest group here, the National Association of Arab Americans (NAAA), Monday vehemently protested the use of Arabs in the sting opera-

Leaders mull Soviet threat

RIYADH, Feb. 5 (AP) — U.S. National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and Saudi Arabian leaders agreed Tuesday in their appraisals of the threat posed to Gulf nations by the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan, an American spokesman announced.

The spokesman, reading from an official American statement on the talks, said Brzezinski and Saudi Arabian leaders also were in accord on the significance of the continuing instability caused by the Arab-Israeli-Palestinian problem." The statement was issued after two days of talks Brzezinski held in Riyadh with Saudi Crown Prince Fahd ibn Abdul Aziz and Foreign Minister Prince Saud Al-Faisal.

The Saudi Press Agency said that Brzezinski's talks "dealt with the Middle East, international developments and bilateral relations. The president's security adviser flew to Riyadh from Islamabad, where he assured Pakistani leaders of substantial U.S. aid to bolster the country's defenses.

In the morning Brzezinski held a second round of talks with the Foreign Minister. Monday, Prince Saud and Brzezinski discussed the Mideast problem, world affairs and bilateral ties.

As Brzezinski was departing, official American sources announced a U.S. Navy F-14 jet from the aircraft carrier Nimitz - not an Iranian interceptor - approached a special plane carrying the security adviser.

The sources, traveling with the Brzezinski party, said reports that his plane had been intercepted by an Iranian F-14 were dismissed as " totally erroneous" by the National Military Command Center in Washington.

SCHMIDT IN FRANCE: French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing greets West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt on the steps of the Elysee Palace before the start of the 35th Franco-German summit Sunday.

France, Germany warn

Afghan crisis threatens detente

PARIS, Feb. 5 (AP) — French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt warned Tuesday that East-West detente "would not withstand another shock of the same order' as the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

In such an instance, they said in a formal statement, "France and the Federal Republic of Germany would take, in liaison woth their allies, the necessary measures ... to guarantee their security and defend international stability."

The statement, after intensive summit talks here, said the two leaders feel that "the current crisis is sure to unleash a process which. step by step, and whatever are the intentions, could have the gravest consequences for the world." They said that because of the intervention, detente has become more difficult and more uncertain, and in consequence the withdrawal of the for sign troops from Afghanistan is necessary.

In a formal joint statement on the final day of a summit meeting here, they again called the intervention unacceptable and said it "creates grave dangers for the stability of the region and for peace."

Leaders of the two autions also announced their defense establishments will jointly build a new battle tank to replace the French AMX-30 and the German Leopard.

The agreement was signed by defense ministers Yvon Bourges and Hans Apel during the summit. Design work on the tank is to begin this pean powers had "special responsibilities" in the current circumstances and stressed their willingness to exercise them in agreement with their European allies.

But, they said, European efforts to overcome the crisis would only make sense "if the Soviet Union shows its willingness to reply." They noted Moscow's statements that it intended to withdraw its troops from Afghanistan,

"It is necessary that these statements be translated into facts," the two leaders said. "This is necessary to the success of discussions on which depend security and the future of peace," they said.

KUWAIT, Feb. 5 (AP) - The Soviet Union is constructing secret submarine pens along the South Yemeni coast, the Kuwait newspaper Al -Anha claimed Tuesday.

unidentified sources in Paris, France. It added that "a considerable" number of Soviet naval personnel and supplies had arrived in South Yemen in the past few days. South Yemen is located strategically at the southern entrance to the Red Sea. It is gov-

Cabinet reviews diplomatic visits

RIYADH, Feb. 5 — Chaired by Crown Prince Fahd, Cabinet members Tuesday reviewed the results of recent visits here by three prominent world personalities.

Spokesman, Dr. Muhammad Abdo Yamani, minister of information, said the Cabinet heard reports on the visits of Yasser Arafat, the chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky, and President Carter's National Security Adviser Zbigniew

The Cabinet endorsed a proposal by Minister of Finance and National Economy Sheikh Muhammad Aba Al Khail to approve legislation for the transformation of First National Citibank into a Saudi concern as a joint stock company owned 60 per cent by Saudi investors and 40 per cent by Citibank. The transformation would be similar to previous processes in which seven banks were turned into Saudi banks by floating the major part of their equities for Saudi public subscription.

It approved another proposal by Sheikh Muhammad concerning public subscription for the remaining authorized capital of the Arab Fund for Economic Development. The value of the increase will be paid gradually over the next three years.

Saudi Arabia owns 18.5% of the fund's capital in which all Arab countries participate. The fund finances development projects in Arab countries.

A request by Minister of Commerce Dr. Soliman A. Solaim to allow to pay annual subsidies to every chamber of commerce received cabinet approval. These subsidies will serve as an incentive for the private sector to participate in commercial and industrial development schemes.

The Cabinet approved another request by Minister of Communications Dr. Hussein Mansouri to authorize the construction of road and the ownership of bordering land, as long as the road was opened before there was any other legitimate owner.

the contract signed with a West German firm to undertake an economic feasibility study for the Hijaz railway project. The Cabinet entrusted the ministers of communications and finance to exchange views and agree on what is demanded of such a study.

Dr. Yamani said the Cabinet decided that Saudi nationals at home and abroad should be better informed of their country's major social evolutions and development programs.

Information media, especially the press, should focus mainly on the important phase through which the Islamic world is now passing and weigh their words carefully in line with the Kingdom's policy of uniting Muslim ranks, avoiding controversies and polemics which can only make the foes rejoice, the cabinet affirmed.

The two-hour meeting also discussed some aspects of the Kingdom's educational policy which should be drawn up to fit the country's development requirements and be based on Islamic faith.

"Education should prepare the right man for the right place and the country's youth should be trained adequately and acquire the necessary know-how to serve their country best," the cabinet decided. Prince Fahd told the Cabinet that the Kingdom's educational policy should center on methodology and the production of an excellent quality, rather than on quantity.

He said that every youth who graduates must find an adequate job within an integrated scheme which caters to the country's requirements and considers the aspirations of each family.

The Cabinet also discussed campaigns to which Saudi nationals studying abroad are subjected. Prince Fahd said that a communication bridge between those students and their country should be created to shelter them against the malicious trends directed to their faith, nationalism and, most often, mor-

Planning minister says

Cabinet is examining

JEDDAH, Feb. 5 - The Council of Ministers has decided that it is necessary that women work. Planning Minister Hisham Nazer says that discussions were not on whether a woman should or should not work, but on where she can work in conformity with the Sharia.

In an interview published Tuesday in Al Riyadh, it was put to Sheikh Hisham that the present education policy for women concentrates on graduating teachers, which will result in the long run to work as clerks or other workers.

Sheikh Hisham said that this was a highly important point. The Council of Ministers has set up a committee to decide the posts to which women may be appointed in accordance with the Sharia. It will then direct girls' education according to areas of need.

He was asked why some people use all the latest products and drive the latest cars. It resulted from the government's desire to make the public enjoy the wealth of their country, but would the concentration of the Third Plan on productive industry make the public comply?

He replied that the second plan concentrated on building public works, or basic services, which are the foundation of development. Housing, health, roads, telephones, electricity, desalination plants and many other projects by the government are for the benefit of the public and free them from investing in these things.

The Third Plan, through, will decrease investment in basic services and concentrate in productive industries, he said.

There is a general concern about rising rate of consumption resulting from development in the country. Now roads in agricultural areas, for example, were intended to raise investment in agricultural project's and increase production, Sheikh Hisham said. But the reverse happens. Easy transport means that imported goods can be delivered to areas they could not reach in the past, increasing imports. Increasing individual incomes are always accompanied by the use of additional things.

Saudi Arabia faced a shortage of manpower in the First and Second Plans, he was asked. What will happen when the huge industrial complexes are completed. The import of tens of thousands of foreign work-

Don't be alarmed, Sheikh Hisham replied. The Third Pian will need more workers, that is true, but foreign manpower will be cut back by about 55 per cent instead. Here is how.

Most of the foreigners we have here are working in construction. When development projects are completed large numbers of them will leave the country. They are to be

Arab airline chiefs discuss cooperation

JEDDAH, Feb. 5.(SPA) - Aviation experts from five major Arab airlines opened meetings here Tuesday to discuss improving cooperation.

The five companies are Saudia, Kuwait Airways, Alia, Gulf Air and Middle East Airlines, according to SPA. Opening the four-day meeting, Saudia General Manager Ahmad Matar hailed the tion in technical services. He said the committee will discuss specific long-term objectives among the companies, including the unification of types and specifi-cations, as well as the distribution and efforts of airline representatives at coopera-exchange of technical services. The meeting is the continuation of a conference of general managers of the companies that was held in Bahrain in July.

An Islamic experts group on civil aviation is meanwhile scheduled to meet at the Organization of the Islamic Conference here next week to discuss cooperation and coordination among airlines of the 41 member states. replaced by more qualified but fewer workers to run industry,

He said that in building industries two factors were taken into consideration, and later a third energed. The two basic factors are: established industries should increase their income regardless of costs, and they should be capital intensive industries with minimum of workers. The third factor is that the majority of these industries should not depend on the consumption of large quantities of water.

Besides, the workers who will run the industries can easily be replaced. There are now about 13,000 Saudi Arabian students in the United States alone, 40,000 in Saudi Arabian universities and many others in European, Middle Eastern and Far Eastern countries, Sheikh Hisham said.

He added that training Saudi Arabians in vocational schools is a long term affair. Saudi Arabia has so far achieved 100 per cent Saudization at the Kharj arms factory. The majority of Saudia pilots are now Saudi Arabians, and over 80 per cent of those involved in oil-related work are our nationals, he said. The Royal Commission for Jubail and Yanbu has adopted a policy of Saudiazation, which in the long term will solve the problem. There are many vocational schools, but were do the trainees from these institutions go?

So far, not many people have joined vocational centers, and graduates mostly go to the Ministry of Defense.

Al Riyadh said the Real Estate Development Fund grants million to those who have millions, grants loans to people who have land. Good, and the government had allocated over SR30 billion for this. None of that has gone to citizens who do have neither money or land.

Sheikh Hisham replied that the whole development housing is not reflected in the Real Estate Development Fund's activities. They are part of an entire housing program which includes housing projects established by the government, which are granted to people who do not own land, Government housing projects are to be distributed to those who have not been granted loans and who do not own land.

Nomadic life isn't the same as Sahara trek gets tougher

There is no doubt that life for nomads on the fringe of the Sahara is getting tougher - even the old men admit it. Those like the nazir, who have spent their whole lives in the endless search for grazing, increasingly complain of being hemmed in by development projects.

On their annual migrations they often find traditional routes feaced off by huge, mechanized farms.

During the last two years they have come across a new obstacle drilling sites, where Western concessionaires are exploring for the high-quality oil known to exist under th sands of Kordofan.

Sudan is in the grip of its worst-ever financial crisis, and the oil search takes precedence over rights of way.

Such considerations are well beyond the ken of the nomads, however. They follow set migration routes year after year, never straying into the territory of other tribes.

TEL AVIV, Feb. 5 (R) — The popularity of Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin has reached an all-time low, according to an opinion poll published Tuesday by the daily Jerusalem Post.

It said that only 24.2 per cent of Israelis questioned said Begin was suited to be brime minister, compared with 27.5 last November. The poll, conducted last month, said labor opposition leader Shimon Peres' popularity has increased from 13.8 to 16.5 per cent. In a separate development, Begin Monday stepped into a growing row over desecration of Christian shrines in Jerusalem by Jewish vandals and promised action to stop it.

"The authorities will not tolerate acts of this kind," he said in a statement. "By the laws of Israel all faiths enjoy absolute freedom of worship, protection of their property and access to shrines."

His statement followed complaints by Christian clergymen that Israeli authorities had done little to hunt down Jewish extremists who have desecrated the shrines in recent

The vandals have smashed stained glass windows, defaced tombstones and daubed Christian bookshops with the words "pigs", "bloodsuckers" "missionaries". Some clergymen have been spat upon and threatened. Damage is estimated at between $ 2,000 and Begin claimed that religious tolerance had been exercised during the 13 years since Israel captured Arab East Jerusalem.

"The authorities will therefore do their utmost to prevent a recurrence of such criminal acts," Begin said.

Christian churchmen have recently criticized Begin for not taking a public stand on the issue. Their criticism echoed complaints from other quarters in Israel that the Begin government consistently took a lenient view of Jewish extremism.

Cambodia, Vietnam top U.S. report as major violators of human rights

State Department, analyzing human rights around the globe, reported that Cambodia, Vietnam and North Korea were among the most violently repressive countries in the world.

The 154-nation study released [uesday said conditions generally have improved in Africa and Latin America. It was sharply ciritical of the Soviet Union, estimating the number of political prisoners between 2,000 and 11,000 and stating that the Kremlin regime "recognizes no right to any opinion or behavior it chooses to regard as deviant."

"less prevalent" than before, the report said Soviet prosecutors have not failed to convict prisoners accused of political crimes in the 62-year history of the revolution.

Entry for doctors requested by Cambodia relief marchers

BANGKOK, Feb. 5 (AP) - Participants in a "March for Survival" to be staged at the Thai-Cambodian border have made emotional pleas to the Hanoi and Phnom Penh governments to allow Western medical aid into Cambodia and help avert mass bloodshed at the embattled frontier.

More than 120 Europeans and Americans - many of them prominent politicians, entertainers and relief officials - were to depart here Tuesday for the border where they plan to spend three days dramatizing the plight of the war-wracked nation.

"If the remainder of the Cambodian race is not allowed to survive, it will not be through a lack of food, medicine, love, compassion. We are here. We care." American folk singer Joan Bacz told a news conference on the eve of the march.

A number of participants placed the blame for Cambodia's current woes on Vietnam and the Phnom Penh regime since they have not allowed Western medical teams into a country desperately short of doctors and have limited the channels through which food and other aid could be brought into the country.

To ward off criticism that the march was a publicity stunt by celebrities that might eopardize existing international aid operations, Baez said the relief effort so far has not been "adequate" and new conduits had to be can convention on human rights, which sets Although torture in the Soviet Union is forth standards for members of the organization of American states.

Among non-Communist countries, the report was perhaps most critical of South Africa where, it said, the non-white majority "suffer pervasive discrimination in all areas of life" their basic human rights are systematically violated."

The annual report previously was limited to analyses of recipients of U.S. military and economic aid but this year was broadened to include all countries, the report was required each year under a provision of the Foreign Assistance Act.

China, the report said, has a mixed record. There has been "movement in the direction of greater freedoms" in the years since the death of Mao tse-Tung, inleuding a livlier press, a formal legal system and some tolerance of dissent.

"But reforms have not yet broken the entrenched pattern of harassment, arbitrary arrest and harsh punishment for political dissent," the department said.

On the other hand, the government in Hungary and Poland were said to be more tolerant of dissent than some of their Communist neighbors.

Outside the Soviet-led Warsaw pact, Communist Albania was found to be marked by xenophobia, a harsh brand of Marxism, militant atheism and a singular and abiding respect for Joseph Stalin." Many of the country-by-country reports refrain from judgments. For the most part, accounts provided by human rights groups and other sources are outlined without comment.

Occasionally however, the state department drew its own conclusions. For example, the report stated flatly that "nowhere in the world are human rights more beleaguered than in Cambodia." In the areas of Cambodia under the control of Vitnamese occupation troops, the report said, "some conditions of life regressed to a level of suffering reminiscent of the Khmer Rouge regime of 1975-78.

Delayed Aeroflot jet departs U.S. airport

NEW YORK, Feb. 5 (AP) - An agreement to end a two-day delay in the takeoff of a Moscow-bound jet carrying 76 passengers has been reached between the Soviet airline Aeroflot and operators of Kennedy International Airport.

Ground crews at the airport, members of the Teamsters Union, had refused for two days to service the Aeroflot jet as a protest against Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

The plane, carrying 76 passengers and 12 crew members, left at 8:32 p.m. Monday after processing of passengers and servicing by management officials of a private company, according to the authority of New York and New Jersey, which runs the airport. Officials had earlier reported that 80 passengers were waiting for the flight. No reason was given for the change.

"The agreement, which was reached with the concurrence and participation of the U.S. State Department, specifies that Aeroflot will not come into Kennedy Airport on further scheduled flights until it has made arrangements with another carrier already serving the airport to handle them," the Port Authority statement said.

Pan American World Airways had suspended its contract to handle terminal and ground services for Aeroflot on Jan. 25 after Teamsters Union baggage handlers and grounds crew began boycotting Aeroflot.

The Port Authority said Aeroflot also agreed that, until it is able to contract for new ground service arrangements here, it will clear plans for any necessary special landings here with the bi-state agency, which will review any such requests with the State

The agreement ended a growing dispute between the two governments over the refusal of crews to service the jet that landed here Sunday, despite orders from the Port Authority to land at Dulles Airport in Washington, D.C. It was known why the plane's crew ignored the order.

"The crudest sort of provocation is taking place against the Soviet aircraft, which must be viewed as part of the unremitting campaign aimed at interfering with the normal air communications between the Soviet Union and the United States," the Soviet news agency Tass had said.

The campaign of "unprecedented actions," the Soviets said, was being launched "with the knowledge of official U.S. authorities," and was in "direct violation of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. international agreement on air traffic."

In Washington, the State Department said Monday that the U.S.-Soviet air agreement does not require it to provide ground service for Aeroflot planes. Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the Soviets were told a week ago that they would have to make alternate arrangements for ground maintenance if they wanted to continue to fly to Kennedy. Department officials said maintenance was available to Aeroflot at Dulles Airport outside Washington.

In an earlier incident involving Aeroflot, a Kennedy-bound flight carrying Anatoly Dobrynin, the Soviet Ambassador to the United Nations, was routed through airspace reserved for other traffic on Jan. 18 after important data was erased from an airport

Federal officials have subpoenaed several air-traffic controllers in an effort to determine if the erasure was deliberate.

Socialists to discuss East-West problems says their missions appeared to be self-appointed and unofficial. Kenyans who asked not to be named say one group of whites came to Nairobi a year ago, while Ian D. Smith was still prime minister in Rhodesia's white-minority government. They say a second group of both blacks and whites arrived three months ago, before Rhodesia's constitutional settlement was reached in London. "They simply didn't believe Smith's prophecies of doom and destruction," the white Kenyan said. "They wanted to see and minority superseded by a black majority. "They were planning for the future, working out development plans, methods of bridging the gap between white and black labor skills and ways to stimulate the economy. "We worked all this out 16 years ago. They wanted to see how we did It and how It worked."

Experienced Kenyans caution against drawing too close a parallel between Kenya and Rhodesia. Kenya's white settlers never rebelled and governed themselves. Kenya became independent under a single leader of unchallenged stature - the late President Jomo Kenyatta - unlike Rhodesia, where several rival black leaders compete for supremacy. Kenyan nationalists fought their war in the hills with homemade guns, before the era of superpower involvement in Africa. Rhodesians fought a bigger war, with foreign money and heavy weapons, and for bigger stakes in terms of the future of southern Africa.

Kenyans subordinated tribal conflicts to the idea of nationhood.

The Kikiku tribe did most of the fighting here and took control of the government.

What worked in Kenya may not work in Rhodesia, the Kenyans say. But they say the lessous whites and blacks in Rhodesia must learn are broadly the same lessons that had to be learned in Kenya.

Kenya was the prize of Britain's east African empire, with well-run, white-owned plantations, a comparatively high degree of industrialization and plenty of wild animals for the tourists. War broke out in the 1950s. when Mau Mau insurgents demanded land 'uhuru'' — freedom.

About 13,000 blacks and fewer than 100 Europeans were killed during an eight-year state of emergency. Panicky whites predicted darkness and death prior to independence on Dec. 12, 1963. Thousands fled to Britain, Rhodesia or South Africa.

Sir Michael Blundell, once a member of the colony's war council, was pelted back then with eggs, tomatoes and 30 pieces of silver by angry settlers when he returned from Britain and openly accepted black majority rule. But Blundell stayed on and prospered in business.

"In those days, Kenya was like Rhodesia is today. I came to the conclusion that the white people could survive only with African support." Blundell said in an interview on the veranda of his Nairobi home recently.

"About 30 per cent of the whites felt there would be some difficulties but I had confidence. Others feared confiscation of property and reverse discrimination and felt it was impossible to stay on," he said. Before independence, about 3,500 whites controlled some 7.5 million acres of prime farmland. Fewer than 800,000 acres are still in white

Britain provided support to the black Kenyan government to buy nearly three million acres at fwurimarket prices from white owners and transfer the land to blacks.

The process, for the most part, took place peacefully and with satisfaction on both sides. About 70,000 whites are in the country today, more than before independence. Most, however, are newcomers on temporary colonials who remained after independence. Whites are in virtually every economic sector. There are white judges, lawyers, doctors, teachers, corporation heads, shopowners and contracts for International companies and agencies. An estimated 5,000 to 15,000 are even a few farmers. There are no white mechanics, bank tellers or civil servants. This is a hold over from colonial days — whites in the upper strata skilled Asians in the middle and Kenyans on the bottom. It's different again from Rhodesia, where whites hold ordinary jobs as auto mechanics, meter maids and shop clerks. Many whites live comfortably in homes courses that made Kenyans complain about a lack on African culture. Whites, blacks and browns rub shoulders in shops, restaurants, movie theaters and clubs. Their children go to school together they worship in the same churches.

IOC wonders how to save Olympics

LAKE PLACID, New York, Feb. 5 (AP) - The harassed International Olympic Committee (IOC) takes up residence in this small mountain ski resort this week to try to save the tottering Olympic Games.

The Winter Olympics, for which this village of 2,700 people has been preparing for six years, opens in eight days and no major problems are expected.

Next weekend the IOC will meet in a quaint, rambling country hotel to ponder the fate of the threatened summer Olympics in Moscow next July, and ways to save them.

As the Soviets pour more troops into Alghanistan, and as President Carter presses on his call for a boycott of Moscow, it appears likely the 1980 Olympics will be dramatically reduced in size or perhaps collapse altogether.

decision as such. The January 15 ruling by the lower court said the plaintiffs' submission that the IOC had violated its own rules on nomenclature of national Olympic committees was capable of examination,

So too was the Taipei claim that the IOC charter on opening and closing ceremonics had been contravened, lower court president Pierre Bucher said.

During the appeal hearing last Thursday, IOC lawyer Francois Carrard turned down the judge's compromise proposal that the Taipei winter spots athletes be allowed to keep the Nationalist Chinese flag their predecessors have used since the Comm came to power in mainland China in 1949.

But he said a proposal to ban all national flags from the Lake Placid Winter Olympics this month be discussed at an IOC meeting just before the Games.

Although Wurzburger, lawyer for Taipei, who was handling the case, said he felt they would rather not compete than go to the games under the conditions imposed by the IOC, this was disputed by Michael Lee, sec-retary general of the Republic of China Olympic Committee.

Lee, in New York, said his nation's team of 18 athletes would arrive next week to compete at Lake Placid, New York, Feb. 13-24. "We have a very definite position and that

The IOC is under contract to Moscow, which has been preparing since 1974 to stage the 21 sports and house some 10,000 athletes, coaches and sports officials and 7,000 members of the media.

The charter lays down that the Games take place at the end of each four-year Olympiad. and athletes all over the world plan their training to fit the four-year cycle.

In these circumstances Lord Killanin, Irish president of the IOC, has taken a firm line. He has said the games cannot be moved from Moscow, either to Montreal, which staged them in 1976 and has all its facilities intact or any other city.

They cannot be postponed, Killanin insists. They cannot be cancelled.

He is unlikely to change his position when he arrives in Lake Placid Wednesday to preside over the most difficult IOC session since he succeeded Avery Brundage eight years

The vast Olympic family, 140 national Olympic committees and 25 International sports federations have remained largely faithful to the Olympic ideal and refused to commit themselves to a boycott. But many of them know they will have to bow to public opinion unless the unexpected happens and the Russians pull out of Afghanistan.

One of Killanin's first appointments in Lake Placid will be with Robert Kane and Col. Don Miller, president and executive director respectively of the U.M.S. Olympic Committee (USOC). They have agreed to convey. Carter's opinion that the games be moved or postponed, though they know there is little chance of either. Kane has said that if the United States does not compete in Moscow it could mean the end of the Olympic Games.

One of the IOCs two members in the United States reached Lake Placid Monday. Monica Berlioux, the IOC's salaried director, came in Sunday to set the stage for the critical session. Monday she carned one piece of good news for the IOC. The Taiwanese Olympic Committee, fighting in the Swiss courts against the IOC's decision that it must compete at Lake Placid without its traditional flag and anthem, had its appeal rejected.

Leslie, a 29-year-old barrister, reached the final in 1976 when he was beaten by Norman's compatriot Bruce Brownlee, but there were no setbacks this time as he overwhelmed his opponent in 52 minutes.

Leslie, who has said he will retire from

Cunningham hopes for England soccer cap

LONDON, Feb. 5 (AP) — Laurie Cunningham, Real Madrid's British winger, returned to London Monday hoping to be given a chance to revive his ailing international soccer career.

Conningham has missed England's last two matches and is hoping manager Ron Greenwood will include him in the starting line-up for the European Championship match against the Republic of Ireland at Wembley Wednesday night.
England has already qualified for the finals of the competition, and Greenwood is likely to experiment when he names his line-up. Cunningham's credentials stand up to scrutiny. He has scored 15 goals since leaving West Bromwich Albion for real in a £

1-million deal seven months ago.
Thriving on the pressure and professionalism at his new club, Cunningham feels he has become a more complete player. His performance in scoring once and creating four other . goals Sunday in Real's 7-0 rout of local rivals Rayo Vallecano was strong evidence in his

"I am playing a lot better now than when I was in England, but I'm still trying for perfection." He says, only balf in jest.

Fixture clashes and injuries have forced Cunningham's absence from the England squad since his departure to Spain. He hopes to play against the Irish, but says: "Just to be in the England squad is enough, but I am playing well and to get a game would be a nice.

Peter Barnes is the man who stands between Cunningham and his fourth international cap.

The blond former Manchester City star underlined the soundness of his own form when netting twice for West Bromwich against his old club Saturday.

Cunningham or Barnes is not the only selection problem facing the astate Greeenwood, who has revitalized England's international fortunes.

He must also decide whether to play David Johnson, whose 20 goals for Liverpool this season have earned him a recall after four years in the Wilderness.

Johnson, scorer of three goals in three senior internationals during his time with Ipswich, certainly looks the part, and could link-up with Tony Woodcock, now well settled with his new West German club IFC

Midfielder Trevor Brooking is doubtful with a groin strain and full back Mick Mills has pulled out of the 20-strong squard with a similar injury.

LIMITING SUPERPOWERS' AMBITIONS

The accepted view at the moment is that the Soviet presence in-Afghanistan will last for a long time. There is no immediate danger of war between the superpowers over the issue: and it will be some time before the Islamic revolutionary forces in that country make their military pressure tell. Change in the situation is therefore to be expected from only two quarters. The difficulties faced by the Soviet-supported Afghan regime have already caused friction between Babrak Karmal and his masters; to the extent that there are rumors that he will have to resign in the near future. On the other hand, the Soviets are still paying the price for their intervention. Their image abroad, especially among the nations of the Third World, will take a long time to recover. Their economy will increasingly feel the weight of both the international sanctions and the cost of the occupation; and this is bound to reflect itself in the internal political situation in the Soviet Union.

The crisis in Afghanistan has underlined the need to put a limit on the ambitions of the superpowers. Detente, one can say, is no more. And if the world is to survive its demise, the onus is on the nations caught in the middle ground between the superpowers to show that they are no easy prey; that there are other interests besides those of the two giants. France and Germany are attempting to establish themselves as a bloc to provide some counterweight; and although the attempt is not expected to succeed, it provides a powerful incentive to the rest of the world to look for a third way in which the independence and interests of the rest of the world are guaranteed.

The most dangerous effect of the dissolution of detente is the uncertainty which is seen to surround the fate of the Middle East as a whole - an area crucial to the international community both strategically and economically. To counter this, the United States is pressing for regional security arrangements including itself and the states of the area. But the Americans ought to realize that the Arab countries of the Middle East see the gravest danger to its stability as coming from the divisive and unjust Camo David agreements and all that stemmed from it. Unless this danger is removed, there can be no real peace in the area; nor will the countries there be able to devote their attention to the external danger looming in the East. The way to stability is a just settlement for the Palestinian problem. Only then can the Middle East afford the time to look outward.

George Who challenges Jimmy Who

By Anthony Holden

WASHINGTON -"Would I make a good president? I'd be crackerjack. I'd do it with class. I've got a fantastic record. I

Any politician who talks like that should be on his feet, gesticulating wildly, winning over a dubious audience or working a friendly one to fever pitch. But George Bush is sitting comfortably in his campaign plane, talking almost sotto voce, looking nonchalantly out the window between phrases.

The man exudes self-confidence. As of now, for the first time in the two years since he began campaigning, it is possible to report that Bush's confidence may not be misplaced. In the Iowa caucuses last month, the first official hurdle in the electoral steeplechase, he beat the supposed Republican front-runner, Ronald Reagan, into second place. He is "George Who" no longer.

Given a week all over the front pages, Bush sudnas, in his own words, "national name reco nition". He also has, also in his own words, "Big Mo" on his side. Big Mo is momentum, the magic quality accorded those presidential candidates who exceed the pundits' expeditions. Bush suddenly looks like a winner.

It was this instructive in the last few days to stand beside him, ankle-deep in the New Hampshire snow, as he glad-handed his way through straggling clutches of the American grass-roots. Surely a prospective president of the United States has better things to do with his time?

Not so. Memories are still fresh of the last candidate who conducted himself this way: Jimmy Who, a Georgian peanut farmer with an undistinguished record as governor of his state.

By cornering the grass-roots before anyone else, by spending two desolate years in the field hectoring anyone who would give him the time of day, he made quite a name for himself in the Democratic

On Jan. 23 Jimmy Who reached perhaps the zenith of his political career with a State of the Union address which had the skeptics of Capitol Hill on their feet in admiration. The obstacle to his continued tenure of the White House is no longer Ted Kennedy, but an opponent from the enemy party who is unashamedly stealing his act.

When Carter came to office in 1977, George Bush was director of the CIA. The man who had been everything - two-term congressman, ambassador to the United Nations, chairman of the Republican Party at the height of Watergate, envoy was suddenly deprived of a job. He used his unwonted leisure to read books about the extraordinary manner in which Jimmy Carter bad planned his route to the White House.

Winning the presidency, those books told him, was no longer a matter of being the right man at the right time, seizing the nation by the scruff of the neck, or whatever. It was a trick of organization, of persistence, of giving up three years of your life to traveling the country, making speeches, wooing people, getting them to work for you, while the more obvious contenders were too busy carrying out their duties in the administration or on Capitol

Next thing Bush knew, his old friend Jim Baker - campaign manager in 1976 for the very president he'd just been reading about, the one deprived of office by the unknown peanut farmer - dropped by for a drink. Baker was convalescing as if from a serious iliness. How could that man of little talent from Georgia have beaten an incumbent president of the United States?

Between them they realized that night, now almost three years ago, that lightning could perhaps strike twice. Im Baker is now George Bush's campaign manager, with Gerald Ford's blessing, and he is proving that he has learnt from his own mistakes. George Bush's intent, with Jim Baker's expert assistance, is to out-Carter Carter. It is far too early yet to say whether he will pull it off, despite the fact that Carter himself is forced to play it very differently this time around. Bush has to beat Reagan, John Connally, Howard Baker and others betore de cao even But the omens are good.

Before audiences astute enough to smell a winner, Bush can do no wrong. His Connecticut Yankee origins are obvious: a man of inherited wealth, the "preppie" Yale elitist talks modestly of building his own business in Texas, albeit in oil, the most unpopular commodity of the day. He had to meet a payroll. No other Republican candidate can say

He has "unparalleled experience" in foreign affairs and matters of national security. No matter that he held none of his familiar litany of jobs for more than two years, and none with distinction. He has been in the field long enough to have enthused an efficient organization, and to have secured distinguished endorsements. That is how, these days, you get to be president of the United States.

"Strengthen the alliance," he cries tactfully on meeting your correspondent, who can deliver no votes. "Special relationship, you bet." Bush has energy enough, at 55, to maintain so draining an ambush on his nation's highest office. He has the right word for everybody. His stump speech is as bright as ever in front of schoolchildren too young to vote.

He admits, at least, that he doesn't know how long the adrenalin will last. "But", he adds, "I'm two-thirds through my campaign, and I'm beginning to get somewhere. Others have only just started, but I've been on the road two years That alone, given the system, may be enough to for a British audience, to quote Margaret Thatcher as evidence of the right-wing's potential for victory in the ensuing election. By then, he is surely right, foreign affairs will have given way to inflation and energy as the predominant issues.

In the meantime, Ronald Reagan and others are not going to lie down quietly. But Carter's men are shrewd enough to have set their sights on Bush already. "He's playing our game very cleverly," one of them told me. "We'll have to invent some new rules." — (OFNS)

Class war keeps Britons in their place

By Aurioi Stevens

LONDON -Class inequality in Britain is as bad as it was at the turn of the century. That is the verdict of two academics responsible for the largest study ever made of a subject that has long obsessed the British and their critics.

They say 80 years of economic growth and enlightened legislation have had little impact on class barriers. And they predict that Britain's present economic plight could lead to a hardening of class lines as the "have nots" lose faith in their ability to improve their position by individual effort, and the "haves" assert themselves to ensure they pass on their privileges to their children.

The study, the Nuffield Mobility Survey, was carried out at Oxford University under the supervision of Professor A.H. Halsey and Dr. John Goldthorpe.

The findings are published in two books.

Halsey and Goldthorpe admit their research is not free from value judgements (both are firmly committed to increasing social mobility), but they say they have made "an attempt to marry a valueladen choice of issue with objective methods of data collection."

The survey is based on the careers of 10,000 men who were aged between 20 and 64 in 1972. Goldthorpe's study shows upward mobility has been produced by the enormous expansion of the technical managerial and professional classes, known collectively as the "service-class."

Nonetheless, the relative chances of a boy from a working-class home gaining a service-class position remain as unequal as they ever were. At the same time there has been a decline in downward mobility. with the result that the working-class in Britain though smaller than it was is more homogeneous than in any other Western country or in earlier generations.

Halsey's study of the education data shows an enormous expansion in the amount of education provided for the whole population. However, the higher social classes have benefited most: working-class entrants to university have increased by only 2 per cent, compared to 19 per cent for boys born into the service-class and 6 per cent for boys born into the intermediate classes.

Division of state schools into selective grammar schools, selective technical schools and secondary modern schools for the rest did not produce the pure meritocracy intended. A boy from a workingclass home still had to be seven points better on intelligence tests than a boy from a service-class home to get a grammar school place.

(Secondary modern and grammar schools are now being replaced by "comprehensives", which cater for all abilities. However, the comprehensive system is under attack.)

In the period under survey, acquiring a grammar school place was the single most important determinant of later success. Grammar school boys, like those who went to private schools, had a much better chance of going to university than boys of identical social background and intelligence who vent to secondary modern schools.

Private schools provided these chances for boys who failed on merit to win a selective state school place, therefore thwarting the efficient operation of system of equal opportunity. Haisey and Goldthorpe conclude that public policies designed to offer opportunities are not in themselves enough, though they may have prevented a worsening of class division. "Social democrats," Halsey says, "have failed to realize that some groups will fight back." (OFNS)......

A majority of newspapers Tuesday led with the joint communique issued at the end of Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky's official visit to the Kingdom. The communique denounced the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, and recognized the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people. In a lead, Okoz reported that Kreisky emphasized the need for recognizing Palestinian rights during a meeting in Riyadh with PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat. The reported plan of the Real Estate Development Fund to fix the rent of buildings constructed with state loans was the lead story in Al Riyadh.

Newspapers frontpaged Arafat's strong denial of any contacts with Egypt and his call to the United States to improve its relations with the Islamic world. The reported burning of the French embassy in Tripoli by Libyan demonstrators and French protest to the Libyan govern were prominently displayed on the front pages of newspapers, which also reported heavy troop concentrations on the borders between Tunisia and Libya.

In a front-page story, Okaz reported that the Turkish ambassador to the Kingdom said that the Kingdom's aid to his country will help solve its economic problems. Okaz also frontpaged Syria's reported decision to withdraw its peacekeeping force in Beitut. Al Nadwa highlighted on its front page that the U.S. will give heavy military and economic aid to Pakistan. It also reported Crown Prince Fahd's meeting with U.S. Presidential Adviser Brzezinski and Bani-Sadr's assumption of office as the first President of Iran. The arrival of the Venezuelan President in Riyadh next Monday formed a major front-page story in Al Jazirah.

Newspapers stressed the significant outcome of Kreisky's visit to Saudi Arabia, Al Bilad dealt with the Saudi-Austrian joint communique, saying that a just and comprehensive peace in the region cannot be achieved unless the legitimate rights of the people of Palestine are restored, Israel withdraws from the occupied Arab territories and a homeland for the people of Palestine is established on their land. Crown Prince Fahd's statements and his talks with Kreisky have reaffirmed Saudi Arabia's determination to give every assistance and support to the crucial issues of the Arabs , said the paper.

In an editorial, Al Riyadh strongly supported the Kingdom's firm adherence to its principles on Washington's negligence of the and its responsibilities toward the Arab and Islamic world which, it said, has earned respect at the international level. Referring to the Crown Prince's talks with the Austrian leader, the paper said that their concentration on the Palestine issue reflected the Kingdom's principle of firm commitment to the Palestine issue. Okaz also dwelled on the

Saudi-Austrian talks saying their outcome highlighted Saudi the U.S. is on a fundamental mat-Arabia's role at Arab and international levels. The paper added that Kreisky's visit would further support the Arab stance on a just and lasting peace in the region. The concern of the two countries on the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan throws further light on Saudi Arabia's firm commitment to Islamic causes, it said.

In a reference to Crown Prince Fahd's recent remarks on differences with the United States, Al Medina said the problem centered crux of the issue arising out of the Zionist aggression. If anyone tells Americans that Jerusalem can be bargained for he and the Americans are grossly mistaken, since the return of Jerusalem to the Arab fold is not based on a give-and-take policy. The whole Islamic world will be ready to make any sacrifices for the sake of Holy Jerusalem, the paper said. Saudi Arabia's difference with ter. If the U.S. really wants to do something it must take preent steps to stop this deterioration which only helps in deepening the difference, the paper added.

Premier's sudden visit to Damascus, Al Jazirah hoped it would result in Syria's approval of the Lebanese request to defer the withdrawal of its peacekeeping forces from Beirut until the Lebanese government takes necessary steps to "fill the gap". The paper viewed Lebanon's request at the present juncture as "logical", since the postponement of Syrian troops' pullout will thwart any Israeli aggression on Lebanon. In case of the troops pullout the emilialso be a risk of fighting between the joint Lebanese-Palestine forces and the Phalangist militia, which would further jeopardize the security conditions in the country paper said.

American athletes begin to wonder

What price glory?

By Thomas Boswell

WASHINGTON - Under the gathering clouds of anOlympicboycott, America's athletes and coaches are being forced to ask themselves a fundamental, but frighteningly unfamiliar question - "Why?"

The price of excellence in athletics, especially in Olympic sports, has inflated dramatically in recent years.

The 1970s brought into focus a world of international child athletes and prepubescent gold medalists in a host of sports.

Those champions who were not children often won their fame in games marred by steroids, amphetamines, blood doping and a pharmacopeia of chemicals used to produce hybrid ideological warriors.

What is the human cost of becoming a famed Olympic-class swimmer, gymnast or track star - the next Mark Spitz, Nadia Comaneci or Bruce Jenner?

What is the lasting psychological or physical price that must be paid, even in obscure and profitless sports, to be the best speed skater or volley ball player in the world? In this new decade, what is the tariff that a

Puerto Rico and Montreal."

In Colorado Springs, Flora Hyman has been a star of the U.S. women's volleyball team - a cofavorite for the Olympic gold with Cuba — a squad that has been secluded for five years of Marine Corps-style bootcamp training 50 weeks a year.

"I've only given up seven years of my life and my whole future," the 25-year-old Hyman says bitterly. "If there are no Olympics, what have I have I done with my life?"

Perhaps no American athletes approach the fanaticism of the U.S. women volleyballers, who unashamedly accept the training tactics of the Cubans, Soviets and Japanese as

"Hypnosis, togetherness through common suffering and, ultimately, mind control are my coaching techniques," says coach Arie Selinger who has taken the U.S. team from 19th in the world to No. 2 in isolated compounds for years at a time with no vacations.

"More than any sport, volleyball demands team unity," says Selinger. "You must be one body with many heads and one heart. Overcoming the ideas of individuality, profit motive and democracy are among our probtheir athletes because they test their children. We find 10 per cent of ours."

عسكزا من الما جل

"The first of the New Athletes was Stephanie Willim," she says, speaking of a Weiss protege who could have been the Comaneci of 1980. "She was a shoo-in. She was doing tricks three years ago that no one else has tried yet."

But Willim siffered disc disintegration that led doctors to order her to abandon her career permanently or face being crippled for

"The Communist countries are far ahead of us," say Weiss, a candidate for the coaching job of the U.S. women's gymnastics team now that Linda Metheney-Mulvahill has been deposed. "It's lucky that they only give out three medals at the Olympics, not a top 40, or they'd crush us in almost every sport."

"But we're learning, we're starting younger and younger in many sports swimming, gymnastics, track, alpine skiing, diving, speed skating, figure skating and a lot of others. Once, kids went to college to start becoming serious atheletes. Now, college is already over the hill. You go to college to retire on a scholarship."

What will happen to her children, her pupils, her livelihood, if the Olympics are boycotted?

"It's so unjust," she says, "that I refuse to that on your mind," Margie Weiss offers an example of the ambiguous questions that surround the price of excellence. She is, by any standard, a fanatic. Yet the Weiss' gymnastics school is not some six acre pocket of Romania transported to Silver Spring. "We understand that higher you go, the harder you can fall. We understand that it has to change a young person to hear the national anthem played and see the flag raised in a foreign competition for them, You have to put a cushion under children. We do it with intermediate goals. Each accomplishment on the ladder has its own worth. You don't have to win a gold medal to know that you're worth something." Above all, Weiss is determined that their school will be a place where all the children have something of a sense of family.

It should no t be forgotten that perhaps the most fundamental lure of athletics is its harsh. elite and unrelenting difficulty. The very notion of being a champion has always meant discipline, pain and self-denial.

Perhaps the most grueling of Olympic sports is outdoor speed skating, where windchill factors are often far below zero and frostbite, black toes and frozen lung are commonplace. No one pays a greater price in pain than speed skaters, those hunched-over masochists who often cannot straighten up after a race.

"This year, my motivation suddenly reached a new level," says Nancy Seider, a world record in the 3,000 meters. Others thought Swider was in peak condition. The 23-year-old decided to lose 18 pounds of an already hard 135-pound body.

"I went off preservatives, additives, any kind of junk. If I put something wrong in my mouth, I spit it out. I've known for years how I wanted to feel. I've seen it in other people. It's a look of total purpose and purity. But it's never been me. I don't like the word 'religious,' but I think we each have a God-given ability. Just once in my life, if just for a few months for the Olympics, I want to live at the absolute edge of my potential." That is the essence of the Olympics.

The passion for the Olympics, the need for them, is so great, that, the U.S. women's volleyball team was profoundly divided and shaken two months ago when, after five

"I promised them for years that the day they qualified for the Olympics, they could have a vacation," says Selinger, "A promise is a promise, so I gave them six weeks off, I just got weak."

"The six weeks was history," says Hyman. Every team in the world thought we were nuts. Theory says you can t do it."

But, in a way, the American women had to, We had a lot of problems at the Pan Am Games where we kinda bombed out," says one team member. "Living in the village with 5.000 other atheletes, we were out of a controlled situation for the first time in years. People were wandering around ... we just weren't ready to deal with it."

Some team members didn't even want their promised vacation. "It was voted one," says Hyman, disapprovingly, "So, they took great athlete's body and soul must bear? And is that tax becoming more than the human spirit and body can bear?

Has the whole issue of the Olympics, whether it can, or even should, continue to exist, come at an appropriate time? Could the demise of the Games even be a blessing, a cleansing of our sports?

Normally, such questions would be unwelcome among coaches and athletes just months before another Olympics.

But in these days of limbo, it is impossible to avoid such queries. They come to mind of their own accord in every part of the United

In New Haven, Connecticut, Frank Keefe, the Yale swimming coach and head of the U.S. Pan-American Games team, says, "My swimmers ask themselves why they have been getting up at 5 a.m. and jumping in the water by 5:30 a.m. almost every day for most of their lives. They ask why they have trained outdoors when it was so cold that their footprints froze on the pool deck. Even with the Olympics as a goal, kids told me. Drop dead. coach. I'm not doing it anymore. I can't do it anymore. I can't think. And they disappear. That's the natural weeding-out process. Our club teams wear T-shirts thatsay. Take it to the limit. You take it to the limit as many times a day as many days a year as a you can, says Keefe, founder of the elite Fox Catcher Farms swim club in Philadelphia. Our kids are in the water five hours a day, and lifting weights another hour, seven days a week, for 12 months a year. And that doesn't count going to school."

"We're in a sport where there's no money to be had above the table or even underneath it But the Olympics pulls you on. We tell each other. No guts, no glory.

But now, where's the glory? The gem has been taken away." In Palo Alto, California, Robin Campbell, a world-class middle-distance runner, asks why she has followed her coach, Brooks Johnson, from St. Albans School in her native Washington, D.C. to the Unversity of Fiorida to Santa Fe (Florida) Community College and now to Stanford University. "I have lived so many places and traveled so much since I was 13, says the 20-year-old Campbell, "that my aunt gave me an address book for Christmas. She told me it wasn't for other people's addresses. It was for all of mine, so I'd know where I was, "I was only home (in Washington) for one month in 1979 says Campbell, who has had constant injuries for the past four years, including a broken knee cap suffered in midstride that slowed her for 18 months, "Since 1973, it's gotten worse every year. Sometimes 1 joke that I'm going to have a nervous breakdown. But I do wonder what's going on in the back of my mind, I had a race that would have qualified me for the Pan Am Games in Puerto Rico and the World Cup in Montreal last summer, I'd worked all year for it. But whem my race came, my mind went blank. I finished sixth and barely broke a sweat. I didn't even

"I wonder if I really didn't want to go to lems. It takes eight years, I believe, to train a volleyball player to think only of the team in all situations.

'We've all had school, friends and family taken away," says Rita Crockett, a team member for only 18 months.

"I gave up getting married. When I came to Colorado Springs from San Antonio, My boy friend and I were discussing getting married. Now, we just discuss getting to be friends again. My phone bill to him is $ 150 a week, but I only get to see him four times a year. You can put up with everything if you know you're doing it for a purpose and for your country. But now it looks like I'll never be known as an Olympian. I'm 22 and if we boycott this one. I just don't know if I could do this four more years. I guess maybe I could. One of our girls is 29 ans she's been training for six years."

In Silver Spring, Maryland, Margie Weiss sees her whole way of life endangered.

She and her hysband, Greg, have been training 100 gymnasts, like 14-year-old Olympic hopefuls Sheri Mann and Jackie Cassello, for six hours a day, six days a week, for the last four years in their hand-built wooded complex.

The Weiss' whole family life is built around what Margie Weiss calls "The New Athletes" — the children who start their careers as soon as they can walk, and, if possible, even

Her own infant daughter, Geremi, took her first steps before she was a year old on a balance beam. Now, at six, Geremi can already do gymnastic tricks that "no woman could do at the '72 Olympics," according to her mother. The Weiss' also have more good news about Geremi - she isn't growing. "Early tests indicated that she would grow up to be 5-foot-4," said Margie Weiss, "But I believe that the more gymnastics you do at a young age, the smaller you will be. Growth spurts come in two-week bursts. If you're pounding your body, the growth sections of the bones are going to be pounded down. Geremi is really tiny for her age now, which is all right with me. The Weiss' other daughter, Genna, 7, is already a high diver, with a platform in the backyard. She can do an inward 1 1/2 -- a harrowingly difficult and dangerous dive for adults - and has won diving meets for 10and-unders "up and down the East Coast." in her mother's words.

The Weisses have helped their chidren have the compact, fatless bodies of perfect gymnasts by a simple method: they stopped feeding their children at the age of 18 months.

"We rarely have time to stop training to prepare meals," says Margie Weiss. "So, the kids feed themselves as soon as they can open the refrigerator. We always have apples, oranges, yogurt and health foods in there, so it doesn't matter what they grab. They can't go wrong."

The Weiss's are certain that their children and their pupils are the athletic wave of the future. "The Russians find 90 per cent of

Venezuelan president meets Chadli in Algiers

ALGIERS, Feb. 5 (R) — Venezuelan President Luis Herrera Campins met Algerian head of state Benjedid Chadli Tuesday in an attempt to further improve already close relations between the two oilproducing countries.

Herrera Campins arrived in Algiers Monday on a three-day official visit as part of a tour of Arab petroleum exporting countries which will also take him to the Libya, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Kuwait.

Before returning home Feb. 17, the president will visit the headquarters of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries

Illegal U.S. oil sale halted

NEW YORK, Feb. 5 (AP) - U.S. federal and state authorities filed a lawsuit Mondayin a crackdown on alleged illegal and deceptive sale of about $ 40 million worth of crude oil futures by 30 firms and 37 individuals.

The suit in Manhattan's U.S. District Court charged the defendants ran "boiler-room" operations from eight states and one foreign nation to illegally sell the contracts for crude

The joint plaintiffs in the suit were the Commodity Futures Trading Commission and New York's Attorney General Robert

The court was asked to bar further illegal activity and to appoint a receiver to take custody of all remaining assets and records held by the defendants. The defendants are located in Panama and the states of New York. Massachusetts, California, Florida, New Jersey, Georgia, Texas and Ohio.

The complaint said the contracts were sold illegally mainly because they were not traded through a licensed commodities exchange as between Venezuela and Algeria which raised the price of their crude oil recently in the wake of similar increases by other oil produc-

Venezuela has argued that too high prices would put heavy pressure on the internationaleconomic system, leading to depreciation of the dollar and a recession in the industrialized countries that would rebound on the oil producers.

On the eve of Herrera Campins's departure. Venezuela increased its average oil price by $1.42 to $28 a barrel.

On his first visit to Algeria since he was elected president in December 1978, Herrera Campins will also discuss moves to achieve a new economic order between the world's poorest and richest nations, the source said.

Herrera Compins is accompanied by several government ministers, including Foreign Minister Jose Alberto Zambrano Velasco. According to informed sources Zambrano Velasco will meet a delegation of the Polisario Front fighting for the independence of the Western Sahara. Venezuela has not recognized the republic proclaimed by the Polisario in 1976, although several Latin American countries, including

Cuba and Mexico have done so. Another topic of discussions during Herrera Campins's trip is likely to be OPEC links with the Third World. The Venezuelan head of state has several times dwelt on the importance of principles of social justice at the international level, and said potential hostility between poor countries and OPEC nations should be neutral-

At OPEC's last summit, in Caracas, Venezuelan Energy Minister Humberto Calderon Berti proposed and won approval for a rise of $1.66 billion in the organization's special fund for the Third World, taking it to $4

Subsequently OPEC's permanent representatives in Vienna failed to agree on a precise mechanism for the extra aid.

EEC ministers concentrate on Afghanistan reactions

BRUSSELS, Feb. 5 (R) — Common Mar-ket foreign ministers used a regular meeting here Tuesday to try to tighten up their reaction to Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

The ministers also discussed the community's relations with the Gulf, Turkey and Yugoslavia, all affected by the Afghan situa-

Though the meeting here is formally being held to discuss EEC business, the nine will discuss once more whether they should boycott the Moscow Olympics.

Britain favors the move as a protest against the intervention in Afghanistan, while France and West Germany, hostile to the idea at first, have begun to modify their stands.

U.S. considers exemptions for Disclosure Act

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5 (AP) - The U.S. Agriculture Department said Monday it is considering proposals that will make it easier for some foreign owners of U.S. land to be exempted from reporting their holdings to the government.

But an official said the proposed changes would not alter the basic intent of the Agricultural Foreign Investment Disclosure passed by Congress in 1978.

Among the proposed changes is one to generally exempt all agricultural, forestry and timber land of 10 acres or less from the reporting requirements, as long as the land produces less than $1,000 worth of products for sale a year. Current regulations exempt only parcels of land of less than one acre, including the $1,000 guidelines.

A report issued Jan. 25 showed foreigners and U.S. corporations which have at least 5 per cent foreign ownership held 5.2 million acres of U.S. agricultural land as of last Oct. 31, less than 0.5 per cent of the nation's 1.23 billion acres.

Another proposed change involves farmland held by U.S. companies in which foreigners have an interest. Currently, regulations require land reporting by those "legal entities" if foreigners own an interest of 5 per cent or more in them.

On their formal agenda are the questions of aid to Afghan refugees in Pakistan and what farm exports to the Soviet Union should be allowed as part of the nine's "traditional

They agreed last month not to replace embargoed American grain exports to Moscow, but since then the EEC commission here has halted subsidies on fresh butter sales to Russia as well, a move which France and Denmark may contest.

The moving of Soviet troops into Afghanistan has aroused the nine's sensitivities about relations with other countries on the agenda, Turkey, Yugoslavia and the Gulf states.

They will discuss a West German proposal for a cooperation agreement with Gulf nations, and hear a commission report on negotiations with Yugoslavia for a similar accord which could be signed this month. The nine have a separate meeting with Turkey at which it is expected to seek more financial aid and easier trade terms, and another session with Portugal on speeding up scheduled financial aid to Lisbon. Meanwhile, West German Finance Minister Hans Matthoefer will discuss fresh Western cash aid to Turkey at talks in Ankara on Feb. 17 and 18, the state radio reported.

The radio said Matthoefer had been assigned by Chancellor Helmut Schmidt as "coordinator of aid to turkey." Turkey is seeking fresh credits of at least$ 600 million from Western countries to finance oil imports for the next two months, according to government sources here. The government believes at least$ one billion of urgent and unconditional aid is essential to complement a major austerity program announced last week. arrived - about $ 200 million from the International Monetary Fund (IMF), $ 98 million from the U.S. and $ 100 million from Western banks, the sources said. West German leaders have recently stressed the need to bolster the Turkish economy developments in Iran and Afghanistan. U.K. reserves hit $23b

LONDON, Feb. 5 (AP) -- Britain's gold and foreign currency reserves soared by almost one billion in January as money poured into the pound sterling.

Treasury figures published Monday showed reserves up $987 million at a record $23.706 billion.

The pound has been gaining on foreign exchanges because of Britain's high interest rates and near self-sufficiency in oil.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5 (AP) - The Soviet Union can avoid U.S. trade restrictions on agriculture and sophisticated technology by buying goods through other Soviet bloc nations, a former U.S. Commerce Department official said Monday.

Lawrence J. Brady, who resigned last month, said Eastern European countries are "a sieve for the Soviet Union" and the Kremlin will "make demands on Eastern European client states."

"We can only assume that significant leak-age will occur," Brady told the Senate Armed Services Procurement Subcommittee, which has been investigating U.S. technology sales to the Soviet Union.

Carter's restrictions apply only to the Soviet Union, and not to other Warsaw Pact countries. The restrictions were imposed in retaliation for the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the administration has made it clear to all intermediaries that one of the keys to a resolution of the crisis "has got to be the Ayatollah's acquiescene.'

It would be "pointless" to accept any agreement without the prior approval of the Iranian religious leader, Carter said.

Carter conceded that the administration has not yet found "someone with the authority and the willingness' to serve as a negotiator for the Iranian government. Meanwhile, NBC News quoted unidentified State Department sources Monday night as saying they understood that former U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young "is either on his way to Tehran or already has arrived

The report said Young was planning to meet with representatives of the Ayatollah and militants holding the Americans hostage. It said it was not known whether Young was acting on his own or under the president's

But at the White House, Deputy Press Secretary Rex Granum said, "We are not aware of any plans for Young to travel to Tehran." And a senior state department official said Young was going to Nigeria and Algeria, but there was no indication his trip involved the hostages,

One State Department official, a close friend of Young, said he understood" Andy is traveling entirely in a private capacity." Young has previously visited Africa on behalf of American business. The sources asked not

With the 50 American hostages in Tehran beginning their fourth month in captivity Monday, family members of the hostages received briefings at the State Department on the living conditions of the hostages and the prospects for their release., such briefings have been held periodically since the hostages were seized last Nov. 4. The six American diplomats who escaped Iran last week with the help of the Canadian embassy were invited to take part in the briefings but it was not dear whether all attended.

Carter acknowledged that some family members believe the government is not doing enough to end the crisis.

"Certainly there are people who at this point are so fed up after three months that they are in fact asking why we can't do more,"

Carter said. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, under Secretary of State David Newson and assistant Secretary of State Harold Saunders were among the officials who briefed the family

Carter said the administration was hoping to indicate to the family members that the situation of the hostages is not hopeless.

He noted that 13 hostages have been released outright, that six other American diplomats escaped last week and that widespread global support for the hostages "indicates we are going to get them out.'

Carter acknowledged, however, that there is "no short-term answer in sight. "It is still a matter that's going to require

Inmates took revenge with torches, axes

SANTA FE, New Mexico, Feb. 5 (Agencies) - An execution squad armed with blow torches and axes tortured and murdered fellow inmates during the 36 hours of hell! behind the walls of the New Mexico State penitentiary, inmates said Monday. Officials said 35 and perhaps 39 died and 15 others were missing.

Authorities said the prisoners took revenge on those who informed or were friendly with guards.

"I saw some people cutting a dude s eyes out with a cutting torch." one prisoner told reporters allowed inside the smoldering prison that was recaptured by national guardsmen and police Sunday afternoon after a day and a half of rioting.

The horror encountered during Monday's search for more bodies caused some guardsmen to vomit.

Warden Jerry Griffin said late Monday afternoon that all fires were out. He told families of inmates and reporters that a list of the dead and injured was being prepared and said relatives of the dead were being notified. Prisoners broke into confidential files in the prison central office, where they found the names of inmates who had cooperated with authorities, police said. The information set off a wave of reprisals, they said. Griffin said he could confirm only 35 deaths, conflicting with reports of 39 dead from state Governor Bruce King.

Officials said earlier that 200 maximum security prisoners already were back in one cellblock and Griffin said officers prepared to move additional prisoners into another cell-

He said corrections officers were classifying the prisoners carefully before moving them back inside.

"We don't want to get men in with others that could burtthem," he said. "We're trying to preserve their safety."

About 250 guardsmen stood watch over hundreds of displaced inmates who huddled in tents on the prison grounds to ward off freezing temperatures. State officials hunting a place to put them said they had offers of help from Arizona and Colorado.

King said 32 bodies had been found in the compound and seven other prisoners were dead on arrival at local hospitals suffering overdoses of drugs. Fifteen inmates were still unaccounted for in the nation's worst prison riot since the Attica uprising in 1971 left 43 people dead in New York state.

The uprising began on Saturday morning when, officials said, two prisoners, discovered drinking liquor they had brewed themselves, attacked two guards.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5 (AP) - Dr. Edward Teller, known as the father of the hydrogen bomb, says the Soviet Union would win a nuclear exchange with the United States and the United States would be destroyed.

Teller, in a magazine interview published recently, said he believes the United States is no longer a match for the Soviet Union in advanced technology, particularly lasers. "If we went into a nuclear war today there is parctically no question that the Russians would win that war and the United States would cease to exist," Teller said. Teller, who has been an advocate of a strong nuclear weapons system as a deterrent to nuclear war, said American scientists and engineers are not particularly eager to work on defense projects. "I think their ethical values are confused." the 72-year-old Teller said. "War is terrible and we want to avoid it. But how do you avoid war? By throwing away arms or having strong arms in the hands of those who want to maintain peace?"

Teller said President Jimmy Carter is a victim of the present weakness of the United States because if the president does as he says he is going to do and draws a line against Soviet expansion in the Gulf area, it could result in a war that the United States will lose.

Teller said he is not advocating a new arms race, but "a race of technology."

"The recent statements of our president that, if the Russians do not behave, we may not go to the Olympic games is certainly not enough to make a deep impression," Teller
